

Stopping MRSA is in your hands.

A serious form of bacteria known as MRSA frequently inhabits the skin or nose of healthy people. When introduced to the hospital setting, it can be harmful to patients. Hand hygiene is the single most important method of controlling the spread of bacteria. We are asking all visitors and caregivers to wash their hands before and after contact with patients and their surroundings. This simple act can provide for a safer environment for all.